Purpose and Scope

These guidelines are intended to assist annotators in consistently labelling statements extracted from Nepali electoral campaign materials, including manifestos, pamphlets and social media posts, as either Commitment (C) or Non-Commitment (NC).

The annotation supports the construction of a gold-standard dataset for the task of Election Commitment Mining in Nepali political text. The goal of this task is to automatically identify statements in which a candidate or political party makes a specific, actionable promise directed at voters.

These guidelines should be read carefully before starting annotation.

Task Overview

Each statements in the dataset must be assigned one of the following labels:

C - Commitment

NC - Non-Commitment

Classification guidelines

Commitment statement

A Commitment is a statement made by an electoral candidate or political party that satisfies all of the following three criteria:

(1) Specificity: The statement names a concrete action, deliverable, or policy rather than expressing a general aspiration or intention.

(2) Actionability: The statement implies a clear course of action that the candidate or party can realistically undertake if elected or upon assuming office.

(3) Verifiability: The fulfilment or non-fulfilment of the statement can be assessed after the election.

In practice, specificity and actionability are the primary determinants of the label. A statement that is genuinely specific and actionable is generally also verifiable by definition. A statement that lacks specificity or actionability should be classified as Non-Commitment regardless of how it is phrased.

Non-Commitment statement

A Non-Commitment is any statement that does not satisfy one or more of the above criteria. This includes:

- Vague aspirations or general intentions without specifying concrete actions or mechanisms
- Rhetorical or slogan-like statements with no measurable outcome
- Descriptive statements about past achievements or current situations
- Statements about party ideology or general values
- Candidate introductions, section headings, and administrative text
